IV. Reading Comprehension (10%)

Have you tried every possible way to lose weight only to find yourself at the same weight or even more? Losing weight can be difficult at times because of misconceptions about food and how the metabolism really works. Many foods that we think are low in calorie are really not. We eat what we think is right, unaware of the hidden fat and calories. Losing weight can seem impossible if you're not aware of hidden fat. The good news is that you can lose weight by eating great tasting foods through the day. The biggest misconception is that you have to skip meals and eat "rabbit food" to lose weight. Many people are surprised that you can make great tasting homemade hamburgers made with lean beef, low fat cheese, toppings and whole wheat bread for the same amount of calories and less fat than a bowl of clam chowder. The trick is to modify what you normally eat. You don't have to give up all your favorite foods to lose weight but you need a good diet plan. Avoid long period between meals without eating. This will slow down your metabolism. Manage your portion size and know the approximate amount of calories you will be eating.
